Students registered in FLE groups C, D & E will choose a general lecture in French (Cours Magistral), English classes excluded, among the classes of 1st, 2nd and 4th year levels, that is compatible with their schedule. This class will account for 3 ECTS per semester. This list will be communicated again when students arrive, and they will have around two weeks to make their choice.

In addition to the courses required by the program, students who wish to do so may choose to take one or more lectures in French. These courses will be credited with 3 ECTS

French as a Foreign Language (FLE) 1 & 2

Instructor : Sébastien GREGOV

No. of hours : 22H or 44h – each semester (according to the student's group level)

ECTS credits: 6 ECTS (for A & B level groups) – each semester
3 ECTS (for C & D level groups) – each semester¹

Erasmus code: U1EEF10U (S1) / U2EEF10U (S2)

DESCRIPTION

Courses are specific to each semester in each level, so a student staying for one year, even if in the same level, will not take the same course in two consecutive semesters (whether arriving in September or January).

VOLUME OF TEACHING :

- Two 2-hour classes a week, i.e. 4 hours a week, for 11 weeks or 44 semesters for the 2 beginner levels;

- One 2-hour weekly class for 11 weeks or 22h semester for the 2 to 3 advanced levels.

NUMBER OF STUDENTS PER CLASS: 6-24 (average 17) (depending on language levels).

GROUPS: 4 to 5 level groups depending on total number of students; distribution by level group after an initial test (face-to-face or distance learning) and final assignment after 2 to 3 weeks of observation - experimentation.

MANUAL: Depending on the level of the group assigned: Tendances A1, A2, B1, B2, C1-C2, CLE International, book (and activity book for beginners).

FOLLOW-UP: Description of each lesson, with homework, recorded in an online textbook with free access at the end of each session, updated from one session to the next. Note: at the start of the 2022-2023 academic year, Sciences Po will introduce courses on the Moodle platform. Each course is accompanied by a homework assignment for the following class, which may be graded. Exercises can be written (grammar exercises, listening comprehension based on audio or video documents, free or semi-guided essays on the theme seen in class) or oral (press review, class presentation in binational pairs, sketch, diary of outings, TEDx-type solo performance, etc.).

EVALUATION: Continuous (50% of final grade) and final (2-hour written test on knowledge acquired during the semester, including CE (reading comprehension), CO (oral comprehension), EE (written expression). (50% of the final grade out of 20).

The course is validated if the average of the two marks is \geq or $\approx 10/20$.

¹ Students registered in FLE groups C, D will choose a general lecture in French (Cours Magistral), English classes excluded, among the classes of 1st, 2nd and 4th year levels, that is compatible with their schedule. This class will account for 3 ECTS per semester to complete their knowledge of French.

French history and civilisation: a global history of France

Instructor: Mathieu DUBOIS
NO. of hours: 20H – Semester 1
ECTS credits : 6 ECTS
Erasmus code : U1ETR13U

DESCRIPTION

The course aims to introduce students of foreign programmes to the major issues of contemporary French history and culture. It will stress the link between the national history and the major developments in Europe and in the world from the French Revolution to present day. Different issues will be addressed from a global history perspective to shed light on today's problems. The methodological focus will be an international comparison to understand the specificities of the French society. Understanding the French case will serve as an analytical tool to enable international students to compare with their own national context.

Course outline

- 1) Introduction
- 2) France out of France: The birth of the "Great Nation"
- 3) Revolutionary France: The origins of a modern political myth
- 4) The republican culture in France: The promise of equality
- 5) The French "laicity": A specific relationship with religions
- 6) The French social system: A European genesis
- 7) The French language: Influences and evolutions of a multinational language
- 8) The Fifth Republic: The republican stabilisation
- 9) The Choice of Europe: A national strategy in the globalisation

ASSESSMENT

Written exam on course questions (2 hours)

Modern Political Radicalism

Instructor : Cătălin Avramescu

No. of hours: 20H – Semester 1

ECTS Credits : 6 ECTS

Erasmus code : U1ETR08U

DESCRIPTION

“Radicalism” is a notoriously fuzzy concept. There are “radical” thinkers, “radical” arguments, “radical” writings, “radical” parties, and “radical regimes”. This course will attempt to provide a working definition of radicalism, while at the same time to document the development and variety of modern radical movements. We will explore the formation of some of the most influential radical ideologies and we will also pay attention to the institutional context.

Academic Objectives:

A broad knowledge of the history of radical political ideologies.

An introduction to select theories of revolution.

An understanding of the range of radical regimes and policies.

Learning outcomes:

A. Skills in critical analysis of primary and secondary texts.

B. Awareness of the cultural and historical context.

C. Ability to present key ideas.

Evaluation:

Written examination (1 hour).

Enlarging the International Authority of cities

Instructor : Tamara ESPIÑEIRA

No. of hours: 20H – Semester 1

ECTS Credits: 6 ECTS

Erasmus code: U1ETR46U

DESCRIPTION

A growing interest in cities, and more particularly in their international role, has developed over the past decades, as shown by the approval of the United Nations Urban Agenda in 2016. At the same time, cities are today confronted with the contrast between their ambitions and the vague impact of transnational actions. For instance, how can they take care of global warming while lacking skills and funding for their own environment policy? Despite the worldwide impact of the motto “Think global, act local”, cities strive today to combine their international strategies with a local context calling for isolationism. Is it possible to find a balance between both? Can cities also “Think local and act global”? To achieve their goals as framed by their local agenda, local authorities must seek the best strategy. It would therefore seem necessary to go beyond classic diplomacy to find a lever that allows a more effective internationalization of local democracy. Such is the aim of this course: to reverse the classic paradigm of international relations by offering students the means to think the transnational action of cities from cities themselves; a concept that we called “new urban diplomacy” in our research and that we will test through 2 study cases: Toluca (Mexico) and Casablanca (Morocco.)

Academic Objectives:

Developing a critical approach of the paradigms of international relations

Understanding cities’ policies both at local and at international level.

A complete panorama of the evolution of the international endeavours of cities

Learning outcomes:

Designing an international strategy for a public government

Analysing international contexts in a multidimensional approach

Content (topics)

Introduction and working methods

History of international urban policy

Theories about the international role of cities

Local agendas: managing cities’ priorities

The architecture of New Urban Diplomacy

Tools for new urban diplomacy

Designing a New Urban Diplomacy strategy

Assessment/ Marking

Attendance is compulsory, active participation in class is highly recommended (5%)

An essay, deepening a specific topic of the course (a list of topics will be provided) - (45%)

A written exam (case study) – in written, at the end of the semester (50%)

DESCRIPTION

Democracies and Parliamentarisms in the EU

Instructor: Philippe POIRIER

NO. of hours: 20H – Semester 2

ECTS credits : 6 ECTS

Erasmus code : U2ETR45U

DESCRIPTION

These course objectives are, on one hand studying parliamentarianism and on the other hand, assessing its efficiency in the decision-making process in Europe. Therefore, in this course, we will analyse the status of the political regimes, where law expresses the general will, it shapes public policies, and where Parliamentary Assembly monitors the Executive, and ensures a limited judicialization of Politics. In addition, we will also address the three contemporary types of European parliamentarianism, which are both competing and complementary regarding the way they define and enunciate laws, and to the way they standardise and practice representative democracy:

The European parliament as a legislative body with power of co-decision in the European Union and as an institution in permanent quest of legitimacy.

European assemblies which cooperate in the field of democratisation, security and/or regional cooperation and the implementation of the latter in the process of governance, (the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, the Interparliamentary European Security and Defence Assembly, the NATO Parliamentary Assembly, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe Parliamentary Assembly (OSCE PA), European Senates, the Nordic Council of Ministers, the Benelux Parliament, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation (PABSEC), the Euro-Mediterranean Parliamentary Assembly, etc

National parliaments which monitor the activity of member States of the Council of Europe and of the European Union, and which have helped strengthening the democratic legitimacy of the EU and have contributed to the creation of its regulatory framework ever since the entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty in 2010. Moreover, we will be looking at regional parliaments with constitutional powers, whose number and extent of power have increased steeply (at least apparently) since the mid-nineties, especially in Germany, Austria, Belgium, Spain, Finland, Italy and United Kingdom.

As part of the Chair of Legislative Studies, this course will also address the transformation of the actual work of parliaments (relationship between the Parliaments and the Governments, cooperation between the European Parliament and the National Parliaments, convergence between Parliaments and Ombudsmen, links between Parliaments and Constitutional Courts, Committees and interest groups work, changes in the regulatory and constitutional framework in view of creating norms and laws in a comparative manner, etc.). Finally, this course will be looking at different election procedures, the nature of Parliamentary groups, public funding of political life, and its consequences on the representative democracy in Europe.

European Parliament, National and/ or Regional Parliaments practitioners (members of Parliaments, high officials, lobbyist, etc.) will also be invited to our course.

ACQUIRED SKILLS

At the end of this course, the students shall be able to:

- To analyse the logic and the functioning of contemporary political regimes in Europe.
- To understand the main challenges and the role of different actors in the development, the statement and the legitimation of the legislative framework in Europe.
- To know the different types of representative democracy in Europe.
- To be introduced to scientific literature on legislative studies in English, French and in other European languages.

COURSE OUTLINE

1. History (es) and institutionalisation(s) of Parliamentarism (2h00)
2. Theories, types and contemporary debates about Parliamentarism and about representative democracy in Europe (2h00)
3. European legislative process (2h00)
4. The nature and the functions of the European Parliament (2h00)
5. The role of the national and regional parliaments having constitutional power in the decision-making process in Europe (2h00)

Cities and regions in Europe

Instructors : Thomas AGUILERA, Romain, PASQUIER, Anne-Marie THIRION

No. Of hours : 20H – Semester 2

ECTS credits : 6 ECTS

Code Erasmus : U2ETR24U

DESCRIPTION

During the second half of the 20th century, European political institutions, territories and societies have known dramatic changes. European states have been confronted to multiple pressures through economic globalization, European integration and the growing claims for autonomy from regional and local political communities. As a result of decentralization reforms, europeanization and, more generally, the increasing globalization of the overall economic context, the central administrative Western states have partially lost their monopoly on political initiative. The growing role and influence of cities and regions in the public policy making and implementation is one of the most striking consequences of the double process of decentralization and globalization. On the one hand, central governments have put local institutions in competition pushing them to attract capital and population. On the other hand, central governments have developed mechanisms of recentralization in order to maintain national integration and struggled against regionalisms and territorial fragmentation. All these processes have challenged the narratives of the Nation state that appear nowadays as myth. At the contrary, local institutions like Cities and Regions have gained new legitimacy and developed stronger capacities to take decisions, implement policies, regulate markets and even develop international relations and networks on very diverse domains. Indirectly, but significantly, these developments serve to reinforce both the capacity and the growing legitimacy of the actions taken by cities and regions in Europe. During this course students will be provided with an understanding of territorial politics in Europe, new regionalism, urban strategies and development and subnational paradiplomacy. Students will have to follow 10 sessions on the changing territorial organization of States, regionalisms, Europeanization, sustainable cities, smart cities, political economy of cities, informal cities... Course methodology encourages shared learning through structured debates and discussions while reading the fundamental literature in political science, sociology and geography on public policies, European studies, multilevel governance and urban sociology.
